Citizens To Seek Injunction Against Removal of Earth

BRISTOL TOWNSHIP, Sept. 29 — Third Ward residents have formed a new civic association to seek an injunction against removal of earth from the former Schwartz farm by a Pennsylvania Turnpike contractor, James J. Dougherty, of Forest avenue, temporary chairman of the group, announced today.

He said homeowners in the area fear that the former farm, at Magnolia and Oxford Valley roads, may be eventually used as a dump. Included in the Third Ward Civic Association, Dougherty said, are residents of Margo Gardens, Forrest Avenue, Lynn Haven and other Bath road communities.

C. J. Langenfelder and Son, of Baltimore, bought the 45-acre tract from Joseph Schwartz, to obtain fill for construction work on the eastern extension of the Turnpike.

The contractor has proposed selling the land, when through with it, to the township at $500 an acre for use as a public park and lake area.

"How the township will ever raise money for a park with such immediate needs as schools and improving deplorable roads, to mention two important items among a dozen, is a mystery," a spokesman for the new group said.

At a meeting last week, the Bristol Township Zoning Board granted Langenfelder an exception to residential zoning regulations, permitting the Schwartz tract to be mined for fill, on the condition that the township commissioners remove Walter Rittler as zoning officer and create a recreation and park commission. The commissioners have not commented on the zoning board's demands.

Vigilantes Patrol As Police Seek Barn Fire Bug

Groups Maintain Constant Watch In Bucks Area

NEWTOWN, Sept. 29 — While County Fire Marshal Robert Graham and State Police continued their search today for an arsonist who caused $150,000 fire damage in Bucks and Lehigh Counties, local police and civic groups patrolled the townships of Newtown, Upper and Lower Southampton, Northampton and Yardley borough.

The vigilantes did not report encountering any fire-setting attempts, and Graham and the state police said there were no new developments in the investigation.

Among the civic organizations alerted to prevent further fire loss is the Newtown Reliance company which patrolled last night for the fourth straight time. In Lower Makefield township and Yardley, police made extra patrol late last night.

No More Fires

No fires have been reported in this area since the discovery of an arson attempt Sunday on the farm of G. A. Burdick, Worthington Mill road, Northampton township. A fuse was found between two hay mows on Burdick's property.

State Police said twelve Lehigh County farms in a 12-mile radius were set on fire with fuses found of trails of hay in the past three weeks. Arson is suspected in a fire early Saturday that demolished the barn of Walter Leedom, Doington-Yardley road.

'Definitely Arson'

The fires were described by Graham as "definitely the work of a firebug." He said state authorities have linked the Lehigh County fires with those in Bucks. "We have reason to believe that the fires have been set by a mentally unbalanced man," Graham said. He said 500 persons have been alerted to patrol the area, and urged property owners to report prowlers.

The arsonist apparently entered Bucks County last week, when fire destroyed the farm of Walter Wiley, Mechanicsville road, Bensalem township, on the same day, the farm of Raymond Thompson, Wrightstown-Taylorsville road, was destroyed by fire.

Power Engineers Install Officers

Carl E. Rayborn was installed last night as president of the Bristol chapter of the National Association of Power Engineers.

The ceremony was held at the Odd Fellows Hall, Radcliffe and Walnut streets.

Other officers inducted last night were Richard Carter, vice-president; Francis Hargreaves, corresponding secretary; Martin L. Cover, recording secretary; James S. Hamilton, financial secretary; Clifford W. Jacoby, treasurer; Walter G. Rittler, Jr., conductor, and Albert Mason, doorkeeper.

The new officers will be host to the state convention, to be held in Bristol in July, 1954.

Hundreds Watch Fireball Shoot Across Heavens

A bright elongated ball of fire, streaking across northern skies early last night, startled hundreds of residents in the Philadelphia and South Jersey areas. Many watched its course for almost half a minute.

Scientific observers believed the brilliant light was a meteor flashing across the skies at supersonic speeds. It arced in a northwesterly direction and its brilliance could be seen for miles.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Wisinski of 48 New Rodgers road, Bristol twp., watched the fire ball streak across the sky for "about a minute" last night until it shattered and disappeared in the northwest sky.

The two were sitting on the front steps of their home chatting when Mrs. Wisinski noticed the object and called her husband's attention to it. "We didn't know what it was, but we watched it until it shattered and disappeared."

Newspapers, the weather bureau and Fels Planetarium in Philadelphia were besieged by telephone calls from curious observers.

Times About 6:30

Witnesses said the ball of fire first appeared about 6:30 p. m. Richard Regan, control tower operator at North Philadelphia airport, said.

At a state board meeting, held in Philadelphia last week, Mrs. Bishop said the League favored a "yes" vote on the referendum, scheduled to come before the citizens on Nov. 3.

The League believes past study indicates a need for mandatory reapportionment, non-partisan selection judges and reduced legislative control of counties and other local governments.

Group States 3 More Buildings Needed by '61

By Charles Walton

L.R. MAKEFIELD TWP., Sept. 29 — Clarence E. Ackley, educational consultant of the Pennsylvania Economy League, Inc., last night revealed to residents at the Pennsbury joint school district the results of a survey that has been in progress in that area for the past six months.

Dr. Ackley told the assembled group in an open forum at the Pennsbury high school that two junior high schools and a senior high school will be required of the joint school board by the end of 1961. These suggestions, as placed before the residents, were made to alleviate the crowded school conditions that exist now.

Reviews Findings In a report entitled "The Pattern Unfolds," Dr. Ackley reviewed the findings of the survey which has taken almost six months to gather.

The survey was requested by the Pennsbury Joint School Board which was faced with an almost unbelievable situation. The sudden rise of Levittown and Fairless Hills in the school district had caused excessive crowding of classes to a point where parents raised indignant cries.

Last year, when the new Pennsbury High School was opened, educational experts rated the school as ten years ahead of its time in up-to-date educational facilities. The sudden surge of population in this area has caused experts to make rapid recalculations of their previous statements.

The Pennsylvania Economy League was called in by the joint school board to make the study before the present school situation existed, or was even contemplated.

A condensation of the report "The Pattern Unfolds" reveals that "the impact of this expansion on the whole program of school planning requires careful and frequent study to insure an adequate schooling program with a minimum of inconvenience and avoidance of temporary and makeshift facilities, yet prevent the natural tendency to over build with the resultant excessive financial burden that could bring disaster either now or in future years."

3-Point Program A three-point program was placed before the school board: immediate action, future action and extensive plan for the years up to 1961.

Immediate action included: All districts of the joint school board make full utilization of all elementary classroom available, disregarding district lines. And in Yardley borough: start erection of a four room addition contemplated and plan to discontinue use of the annex.

"This program should make available at the beginning of 1953-1954 a total of 107 elementary classrooms for three districts, 25 of which are annexes or temporary structures or in obsolete buildings which should be abandoned, the remaining 82 classrooms will not be enough to meet housing requirements for that year," the survey report said.

"Even with a continuance of the annexes and temporary structures, overcrowding before the end of the year will doubtless necessitate some double sessions. The completion of the Penn Valley School and the Fairless View School should be speeded up as much as possible," it added.

The survey staff recommends that a definite step be taken now toward the separation of junior high and senior high facilities. In this first step it is recommended that plans for a new junior high school be started immediately. This building should be designed for an enrollment of 1000 with an expectation that it will be filled to capacity as soon as it is ready for occupancy. The enlarged senior high school should accommodate any overflow for a year or two."

Future Action Future action included: Total elementary classrooms to be available

Little Leaguers Hear A's Scout Tell Plans For Next Season

An inspiring talk by Ira Thomas, presentation of awards, and announcements of plans for next season, featured the first annual banquet of the Bristol Little League Saturday night in the Goodwill Fire Company Hall, Swain street.

Thomas, scout for the Philadelphia Athletics, has served 47 years in baseball as a player, coach and scout. He played in five World Series games and has been under Connie Mack for 44 years.

Thomas told the 200 present of his association with Connie Mack, the Grand Old Master, who won nine American League championships and eight World Series. He said that Mack's name will go in the history of baseball.

He spoke of this season's A's team and of the numerous injuries to key players which made Jimmy Dykes' job a headache. But he hoped that the fans would say a prayer for the 90-year-old Mack that he would win another championship and World Series. He predicted that the A's would climb higher next season.

The A's scout told stories about Ty Cobb, "Shoelless Joe" Jackson, and Walter Johnson.

Praises Little League

He praised the Little Leaguers as character builders and said, "Outside the church, athletic fields are the best places to build character and there wouldn't be any juvenile delinquency if boys and girls were given opportunities to go to recreational halls and athletic fields."

In words spoken to the parents present, Thomas advised, "Let's get in back of the boys as the destiny of the nation lies in them."

At the conclusion of his talk, Thomas was presented with a wallet, the gift of the Little Leaguers.

The affair opened by the gathering singing "America," and being led by Percy G. Ford with Mrs. Anthony Pfaffenrath as accompanist.

Andrew Kazimer, player agent of the circuit, was toastmaster for the affair. He gave a brief history of the Little Leagues throughout the nation stating that from 1776 leagues in 1952 it jumped to 3,000 leagues in 1953 with 60,000 young boys participating.

Kazimer told of the plans to increase the local Little League from four to six teams next season, stating that a local industry has already consented to back a team.

Eugene Alpin, treasurer, gave his season's report which showed a balance of $135 in the treasury after all expenses were paid, including equipment and insurance.

Annual Affairs

Warren Armstrong, president, expressed the desire that the banquet be an annual affair.

Plans for next season call for the building of a miniature baseball park. Rohm and Haas has consented to permit the use of the present field for the next five years while the Bucks County Rescue Squad will give the use of some of its ground for next season.

League officers cited the need of financial and manpower support to help complete the park for the opening of next season.

Burgess I. Johnston Hetherington made presentations. He awarded the batting championship trophy to Paul Smith, of the Eagles, who batted .519 for the season, and Joe Bonner, of the Hawks, was given the pitching trophy for his record of eight wins and one loss. The trophies were donated by John Field, Jr., and Angelo Brothers, respectively.

Burgess Speaker

Burgess Hetherington in his address said, "The Little League was the greatest thing to hit our town in recent years. I would like to see some Bristol ball player in the leagues. We haven't been represented for quite some time although some of our boys have reached minor league ball."

Burgess Hetherington complimented the parents of the boys for following the boys' participation in sports for they teach Americanism—to give the other fellows a break and take defeat with a smile.

In concluding his talk, Burgess Hetherington stated, "It takes a man to lose and come back. Anyone can be a good winner, but you have to be able to take it and come back. You must learn to take criticism in the same good grace as the umpires."

Members of the championship Hawks team were presented with photographs of the team and players who will be over age were presented with fountain pens. Kazimer made the presentations.

Those who will graduate are: Bud Della, Joe Bonner, John Whitaker, Michael Dugan, John Long, George Becker, Jr., James DiTullo, Edward Assanowicz, John Dougherty, Dominick Rago, Jack McGinley, Paul Smith, Jack Fletcher, John Boyle, Joseph Kowal, William Hetherington, Jr., John Pringle, Arthur Petro, and Thomas Profy, Jr.

Fergusonville Meeting Hears School Reports

FERGUSONVILLE, Sept. 29.—The executive committee of Fergusonville Community Center and Improvement Association, after hearing a report of the school committee, Thursday, released the following report:

"That the foresight of the school board, in taking advantage of Authority type of financing, was an action full of wisdom, and we hereby want to give credit where it is due. We think our school board has done an excellent job, and want to pledge our help, and say thanks, could be passed over to any area."

The executive committee learned that it could happen that any schools built by our school board could be passed over to any area within our township that may become a separate municipality. Provided, of course, those schools were located in that area." It was asked if that was the motive of Levittown people in their urgent desire for speed.

During this meeting, Mrs. Alverda Shagg was appointed public relations chairman by Roy Hansen, who presided over the meeting.

The recent action of the zoning board of adjustment, in granting the exception in favor of the Langenfelder firm was discussed. It stated that "if more contracting firms would take a lesson from this, they would not meet with so much hostile opposition. The Langenfelder firm tries to help the community improve, while others have no apparent respect for local citizens."

Site for a park was recommended, and it was asked that the regular group be presented with a motion, to the effect that the secretary write a letter to the owner asking dedication to the township for a park.

The improvement committee chairman was asked to call a meeting of his committee to consider further action on board of health situation (county and state); also to discuss a proposal to ask local board of health to amend local health regulation No. 1.

The next meeting will be held at the center, October 8th. Mr. Bowker, Republican candidate for township commissioner, will speak.

Services included Rally Day for the Sunday school students, a box lunch in the parish house at noon and dedication services in the afternoon for the new addition to the Sunday school.

Receive Certificates

Boys and girls received certificates of promotion and many will be moving up into classes next Sunday.

Presentation was made by Paul A. Corcoran, student pastor, and superintendent Walter Franz.

Greatest increase in enrollment has been in the beginner and primary grades, with a dozen or so members average in the other classes.

Old members and friends came back for the Sunday morning service, at which the Rev. George Christ, of Fort Washington, former moderator of the Philadelphia Presbytery, spoke concerning his connections with the late Rev. Jacob Krewson, who served the parish for many years. Two daughters of Rev. Krewson, Mrs. Mary Rockafellow and Mrs. Jenny Kelly, were present. In the parish house many persons surveyed the pictures old and new of the church and its pastors and families.

Offer Congratulations

The Rev. Meyer M. Hostetter and Rev. William A. Wefer, moderator and member of the Philadelphia Presbytery, addressed the group at the 2:30 service, offering congratulations for the growth of the parish and dedicating the new building.

Further services will be held tomorrow evening, Friday evening and on World Wide Communion Sunday, Oct. 4. Former pastors will be present and speak at most of these services.

Lieutenant Promoted

Second Lieut. Wesley R. Fader, 2010 Wilson avenue, has been promoted to the rank of first lieutenant, it was announced today. He is serving with the Signal Corps at Camp Gordon, Ga., as a company commander. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Weldon S. Fader, Sr. of Somerville, Mass., and the husband of the former Mary Esther Monnett.

Need for School

able at the beginning of the school term was set at 128 (exclusive of the 25 rooms recommended for abandonment.)

Enrollment trends indicate, said the report, a need for 114 elementary classrooms at the beginning of this school term and an additional nine more before the end of this term.

For the school year of 1956-57: The first junior high school should be completed and ready for occupancy of 1000 students. At that time the senior high school should be ready with grades 10 to 12 and the overflow of junior high school pupils.

Construction of the second junior high school should be under way, or at least, the site of the proposed school be selected. This was based on the rapidity of increasing enrollments, it was reported.

The third step, to be attained by the school year 1960-61: Buildings completed and providing a total of 158 classrooms, or such other number as the constantly revised data show to be necessary.

Two junior high schools should be completed at this time, each accommodating 1000 students.

The senior high school should be enlarged to provide classrooms for 1,500 pupils.

Dr. Ackley made it clear that "emphasis cannot be too strongly placed on the necessity of frequent re-checks on all measures of need on which the steps of this schedule are based. In all cases of doubt tolerate some double seasoning rather than take hasty steps that may result in over-building," Ackley said.

The report indicated the major home building enterprises are the Fairless Hills and the Levittown project. For obtaining first-hand authentic information regarding the number and ages of the children in these home developments, the Pennsylvania Economy League had tabulated census data of 2431 homes. The number of children in the school district was listed as 3966. This figure was listed as the estimated total for 1963-64 school period.

Pressure Cited

The report read: "Until now the real pressure has been at the elementary level. While this elementary pressure will remain acute for the next few years, it must also be realized that there will be a terrific pressure at the high school level for the next six years, at least."

"As a general rule it has been found that home development projects do not move forward as rapidly as their promoters dream and hope they will. It is highly probable that approximately 2000 dwelling units anticipated for completion in 1953 may not be fully completed until many months later, and then, not be fully occupied."

"It is highly probable that the number of employees required for the steel mill operations will reach its maximum in the very early future with some resultant decrease in acquisition and occupancy of the homes in this area."

"However, industry begets industry, and housing projects breed other housing projects. Each new industry lures additional 'butchers bakers and candlestick makers'. It must be expected, therefore, that the population growth of this area for the next few years will at least approximate the present indications; and in regard to the school enrollment trend, a rather definite growth pattern is already established by pre-school census port described it as an extra bright shooting star. He said it was visible for 25 seconds.

Regan noticed the meteor's arc as he watched the air traffic pattern. A plane was about to land.

The Civil Aeronautics control tower at International Airport, Philadelphia, said commercial airline pilots had reported meteoric activity in the sky.

Believes It Was Meteor

Dr. I. M. Levitt, director of Fels Planetarium, said from the descriptions he had received of the object and its duration in the sky it was a meteor.

He said the object was probably no larger than a walnut. He said it probably traveled at 25 miles a second. By comparison, a high powered rifle bullet travels about half a mile a second.

Levitt said the extremely fast speed of such an object would cause a lot of friction in the atmosphere. And as the atmosphere was heated, molecules from the meteor would drop off, heating the surrounding air. What was then visible, Levitt said, was a superheated column of air.

Backs Meteor Theory

Dr. Charles P. Oliver, chairman of the University of Pennsylvania Department of Astronomy, who did not see the bright object streak across the heavens, said it very likely was a meteor.

He said if reports were true the object was visible for 20 seconds or more, that was an abnormal length of time for a meteor to be visible. It was possible, however, he added.

Dr. Oliver, who was in his observatory at the time the object was reported in the skies, said it was unlikely a professional observer would have seen the object through a telescope unless the lens was pointed in the exact part of the sky where the bright object appeared.

Asks for Reports

As a result, Dr. Oliver said: "We must depend on the public for our information."

He asked all persons who saw the fireball to send their observations to the American Meteor Society, Flower Observatory, Upper Darby, Pa.

Defective Burner Smokes Up Home

A fire caused by a defective oil burner at the home of Mrs. J. J. Jefferson, 421 E. 1st street, was extinguished by the Bristol Fire Department early yesterday. Fire Chief J. J. Jefferson said that only one piece of apparatus was called to the scene.

The fire started in the basement when the electrical circuit to the burner, ventilated the basement to remove dense smoke and kept flames from spreading.

Is Your Home Next?

At this time of the year the fire departments are kept busy by fires started when oil burners back-fire. Even without fire, the damage can be extensive.

An Autumn Skin Care Program

WHEN CREAMING, pay particular attention to the center of your face because that's where atmospheric dust tends to settle.

By HELEN FOLLETT
JUST about now, you may suddenly realize that your summer tan is not precisely what it was in its golden days. The thought also strikes you that those hours in the sun have drained your skin of valuable natural oils. So, make the road back to a pre-summer complexion smoother by giving your skin reconditioning treatments and start now.

Soap and water are an unbeatable combination for removing surface soil. Creaming counts, too. It's necessary to soften discolored skin scales that may be coming away, leaving your once heavenly tan a bit spotty. No girl wants a piebald complexion and that is what it may develop into if it is neglected.

A Toning Lotion
When creaming, pay particular attention to the center panel of your face because this is where the pores tend to trap dust. When you have removed your cleansing cream with tissues, use a mild toning lotion to stimulate circulation and tighten pores that may have relaxed. This is necessary if the skin is not to assume a coarse texture, as it may after having been subjected to the sun's burning rays during the summer.

Massage Action

When applying a cream at bedtime, don't overlook the fact that massage action is as necessary as the cream itself. By working it well into the flesh, you normalize the functions of the skin and those interesting little glands that keep it smooth and soft.

Until your skin assumes a normal appearance, use a creamy make-up foundation and rouge. Also remember that, since your tan is fading gradually, the shade of your powder should follow suit. Start out by mixing a little of your lighter powder with the darker shade you use in the summer. Every day add a little more of the light powder to keep up with the change in skin coloring.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

I know not the Lord.—Ex. 5:2.

In our day several tyrants have said that. One said his empire would last a thousand years. He died a suicide in closer to a thousand days than a thousand years. There are still those who claim to know nothing of God. They will surely destroy themselves. The stars in their course fought against Sisera. They still fight against tyrannous men.

SHADOW OF DEBT

When Congress quit for the summer it was threatened with being called back to lift the $275,000,000 debt ceiling. The threat is still there, though Treasury Secretary Humphrey is still hopeful he can squeeze by.

There is a constant turnover of federal securities. Maturing Treasury bills total $1,500,000,000 a week. On December 1, there will be $10,500,000,000 of notes to be met. Humphrey wants to replace all these with new, long term issues. But the interest rate has increased slightly, which would increase the fixed expenditures of the government.

Savings bonds held by citizens continue to mature. While the holders have the option of keeping the bonds at a higher interest rate, many of them find other investments more profitable and demand their money. To get the money the Treasury issues negotiable bonds which can be monetized, adding to the supply of money in circulation and increasing inflationary pressures.

Thus the national debt continues to be basic in economic problems. High prices and wages are musts if enough revenue is to be provided by the national income to service the debt.

The debt must be handled without more inflation if possible, with it if necessary. It will remain a problem until it is converted into long term paper and then systematically reduced.

Gorillas or Furillo, The Dodgers Rate

By INEZ ROBB

NEW YORK, Sept. 29 (INS)—“You and your Dodgers,” I snarled to head of clan Robb.

He put the evening paper down and said, sort of like Peter Lorre, “you are speaking of the team I love.”

“Them and their gorilla!” I cried. “Bad cess to both!”

“How many times do I have to tell you that they don’t have a gorilla on the team?” Mr. R. demanded.

“That’s the way it sounds on the radio.”

“The man’s name is Furillo, Carl Furillo,” the head of the clan said. “They’d probably do better with a gorilla.”

“Mr. Furillo is the likely National League batting champion,” Mr. R. said with dignity. “And if some idiot hadn’t stepped on his hand—”

“What was he doing walking on his hands if he isn’t a gorilla?”

“He wasn’t walking on his hands,” replied Mr. R. “He was wrestling with Leo Durocher and some fool stepped on Furillo’s left hand.”

“I think bar fights are terrible. It’s what gives saloons a bad name.”

“They weren’t fighting in a bar?” the head of the clan said. “They weren’t in a saloon. It was just a hassle at the ball park.”

“It would serve Leo Durocher right if he was a gorilla!”

“That’s the first thing you’ve said so far that makes sense,” said my spouse. He started to pick up the evening paper. Then he put it down.

“What started this thing in the first place?” he asked.

“You and your Dodgers!” I sniffed. “We aren’t going to have a housekeeper for the duration of the World Series. You and your talk to her about the Dodgers!”

“What’s happened to Susie?” She seemed all right at dinner time.

“And why shouldn’t she seem all right? She’s taking ten days off to see the World Series,” I said.

“But she’s already had her vacation, hasn’t she?”

“Certainly she has. But she came to me today and explained that she had to have time off for the whole series. She’s fallen in love with that gorilla.”

“Furillo,” Mr. R. said, automatically. “You mean she’s got tickets for the series? Has she robbed a bank?”

“No, she’s going to watch the games on television.”

“Oh, well then, she might as well watch them here as at home. There’s no reason she can’t keep the house tidied up and get us a bit of dinner on the side,” the head of the clan suggested, rather complacently. “The games don’t last all day. I don’t see why you women can’t settle little matters like this, without making a project of them.”

“All right, Mr. Justice Holmes,

Your Birthday by STELLA

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 29 — Born today, you are one of those positive self-willed individuals who must have his own way—or none at all. You are the type to cut off your nose to spite your face, as the saying goes. You will find life easier and much happier if you learn a slight lesson of compromise and cooperation, early in life. You have the major qualifications for leadership, if you will only develop them properly. Discover that the velvet glove covering an iron fist is sometimes much more effective in getting what you want than an aggressive display of combativeness.

Fortunately the stars have given you a keen sense of humor and many a time this saves you from taking yourself too seriously. You have a sense for the dramatic, too, and like to see things happen. If your environment gets dull, you are just the one to start something to brighten up the scene. Anything, to be different! Learn to time your stunting appropriately and it can become a useful technique; overdo it, and it will prove an unhappy boomerang. You are ambitious and want to reach the top of the success ladder. The talent is there; just utilize it wisely.

You are often wasteful of your physical energies and are not apt to get enough sleep. Guard your health, for otherwise it could become a handicap at some important period of your life. Discipline yourself a little more.

An early marriage is advised but make a careful selection of a partner for it should be someone capable of advancing with you in life.

To find what the stars have in store for tomorrow, select your birthday star and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

When Junior Uses "Others" To Alibi His Disobedience

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

IT may be relatively easy for you to train your child, aged two to four, not to run into the street if no other children live near your home, or if his playmates have also been trained to avoid the street at play. But if the children he plays with run freely into the street, training your child won't be so easy.

Yet it can be done if you are so vigilant and consistent that he always will be immediately punished when he steps into the forbidden street when and where he knows he shouldn't. (My bulletin "Early Steps in Safety" may be had by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to me in care of this newspaper.)

Personal Responsibility
Your success with this problem will impress on your child that he is responsible for his own acts, no matter what the other children do.

He will have further training in such responsibility when you require him up to the age of twelve or fourteen to come straight home on a certain set signal, such as whistles blown or a light turned on. If you hear this child complain that none of the other children have to do this, you should calmly reply, "It's none of my business what the other parents require of their children," implying, "This is our way."

Wise parents have higher standards for protection and control of their own children than other parents have, and these wise parents must have the fortitude and skill to hold their children to such standards.

Child Solely Responsible
Often you may have heard a misbehaving child say, "Joe told me to do it," or "Jean made me do it." You should then reply, "But you did it," and deal with him as solely responsible for the deed.

In a family of several young children, a younger one may offer the excuse that an older brother or sister "told him to do it," or did it, too. Naturally you will be vexed at the older child and, upon objective evidence, may properly punish him. But you shouldn't ignore responsibility in the younger one. If he is old enough to blame his wrongdoing on the older child, he is probably old enough to have known that the deed was wrong, and to be punished for this deed.

Recently I observed an instance in which two boys, eight and six, without permission went on a dangerous ride in a neighbor's boat. On being apprehended, the younger one pleaded that his older brother "made him do it," meaning that he led him to do it. The father immediately told the older boy he was entirely responsible for both of them, and would be paddled. When the mother conferred with this father in private, the two concluded that both boys were responsible and both should be punished. As a compromise, both boys served a sentence of sitting unamused for one hour.

While we parents properly should impress on the older child his responsibility for leading a younger one in doing wrong, let us also not fail to impress on the younger his responsibility for his own acts. When you find any child often trying to place the blame for his wrongdoing on someone else, you can be pretty sure you have been unintentionally rewarding him for doing so.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

Reading articles on vandalism by children and how the police are baffled, may I say it should be no mystery?

Most parents are responsible, and should by law be held so. When these same parents stop indulging their children and take time out to help and provide good, clean recreation centers and start teaching their children a healthy respect for the law and their elders (which some parents half the time haven't themselves), then our problem on this score will be solved.

I think we should be quick about solving it or we will be building bigger and better psychiatric centers. A bit of punishing when they small, a little less whining on the parent's part would be a help.

It would remind them in time that parents have a social obligation which as a nation we are fast losing. We must remember "Upon foundations laid today, our children must build tomorrow's world."

Skins, Bulldogs in Feature

Two of the Lower Bucks County League's unbeaten collide Saturday night when pass-happy Neshaminy invades Morrisville for a game that will set a trend in the championship race.

The game, set for 8:15 under the Morrisville lights, is the feature week-end attraction of a slate that sends Delhaas to Bristol Friday night and Pennsbury to Southampton Saturday for other intra-conference conflicts. The inter-league card has Bensalem at P. S. D. and Council Rock at Lower Moreland for Saturday matinees.

The defending champs from Neshaminy honed their already-sharp passing game last Friday at home against hapless Delhaas. Their 19 completions in 32 aerial efforts installed them as far and away the fanciest overhead team in the conference.

There was room for conjecture, however, when Coach Harry Franks' gang turned up with minus-nine yards on the turf against the dogged Delhaas forwards. Coach Gordon Davies, Morrisville's resident genius, had the Redskins under microscope in the affair. If he found the answer to Ken Kaufman's passing, there may be an interesting evening for all hands in Morrisville Saturday.

The Bulldogs tuned for their big one by belting Southampton, 25-7, as skittish Arvie Powell and big Bob Brewer shouldered the scoring load. It was the second straight four-touchdown effort for the Bulldogs, who have spruced up considerably since their blanking in an opener at Upper Moreland.

At Bristol much will hinge on the repairs made on Larry Cohen's damaged shoulder. The sprinting halfback had very little to do with football last week as his comrades got bounced by Pennsbury. He punted eight times and booted off twice in his one-play appearances. Off their respective records Delhaas and the Warriors shape up as dead heat teams. The Tigers boast a defensive edge, but Bristol has shown more go on attack.

Pennsbury is expected to breeze by Southampton if Dave Bray, Jim Bazlow, Mike Baldowski, Tom MacMillan and Mort Caffey, their all-star backfield corps, find running room. The Falcons will be stalking their second conference win in three tries.

Council Rock hopes to find a softer touch outside the loop than it has in howling to Delhaas and Bensalem. Coach Dom Sagolla will direct his attention toward conditioning the injured Bob Treschner and Earl Johnson, ace backs, for their trip to Lower Moreland. Both boys were absent as the Indians were decommissioned, 38-0, by Bensalem.

The Bennies, on the other hand, hope to continue their brisk comeback from a lidditing 27-6 defeat at the hands of Pennridge. Coach Marion VanHorn's charges rebounded to nick Central Bucks and pound Council Rock. They will rule even up the Deaf school.

In last year's scrambles between the week-end combatants Bensalem lost to P. S. D., 18-7; Council Rock to Moreland, 7-6; Neshaminy was a 27-14 winner over Morrisville and Pennsbury edged Southampton, 12-6. Bristol and Delhaas did not play.

Neshaminy JVs Trim Delhaas in 13-0 Tilt

LANGHORNE, Sept. 29 — Neshaminy Junior Varsity defeated Delhaas Jayvees, 13-0, yesterday afternoon on Playwicky field.

The winners scored in the first and second periods and then were held scoreless the remainder of the game. Delhaas threatened in the final quarter when it reached the Neshaminy 10-yard line on a 30-yard pass, Joe Campbell to Charley Leighton.

A pass, Bill Barrett to Ned Moyer, covering 50 yards gave Neshaminy its first touchdown with Don Seiz converting the extra point via a dropkick.

Tom Moffett scored the second six-pointer from the 1-yard line after Neshaminy recovered a Delhaas fumble on the 10 and on straight line plays went to the one.

Candidates for the team, which held its first practice last weekend are asked to contact Warren H. Sigmund, Sr., Ritter avenue, Fergusonville. Practice is set Wednesday night at 7 o'clock at Cedar and Hilltop under the lights and again Saturday at 9:30 a. m.

Delhaas Pulls Out Of JHS Football

The scheduled football double-header involving Delhaas and Bristol schools here Friday night has been cut to a single game, it was announced today by Gerald Bloom, athletic director at Bristol High. Delhaas, he explained, has abandoned plans to field a junior high football team this fall.

The double header had been scheduled to begin at 6 p. m. With the cancellation, the single tilt will go off at 8 under the Bristol lights.

The Velvet HAND

by HELEN REILLY

SYNOPSIS

Returning to his home in Denfield, Conn., after a long absence in Mexico, Philip Haven, a writer, finds his young niece, Libby, who also served as his secretary, missing from the house. Believing that she may be visiting her cousin Kit in New York, Haven phones the latter's apartment only to learn that Libby had not been there.

CHAPTER TWO

IN THE preceding October, a distant cousin had left Philip a large sum of money he didn't particularly need. Kengh, Campbell, Straut and Frobiasher had handled the legal proceedings. Hugo was a junior member of the firm. On his first date with Kit he had asked her how it felt to be an heiress. That had made her laugh. Not a chance, she had told him. "Philip will go through that money like a knife through butter. He makes plenty from his books to live comfortably on. Besides, on the rare occasions when he worries, it's Libby he worries about. He says I can take care of myself."

"Cavanaugh?" Philip stared at Kit. "Of course I remember him. What's he got to do with it? If you've got something to tell me, come to the point."

"I think Libby and Hugo Cavanaugh—"

Philip laughed on a short, high note. "Are you mad?"

He was no longer looking at her. A car had come up outside. Footsteps crossed the terrace. The front door was still open. Someone came through it. Kit turned. It was Hugo.

Kit hadn't seen him in more than two months. He looked exactly as usual, with that rakish carriage to his brown head, careless and cocky. There was no one with him. He said easily: "Hello, Kit. Have you solved the mystery? Do you know where Libby is?"

For a moment Kit stood staring blankly at Hugo. She couldn't believe her ears.

Her uncle said: "I told you you were out of your mind. Kit Cavanaugh doesn't know a thing. I rang him right after I called you."

Hugo was studying her face thoughtfully with his bright hazel eyes, eyes that had been black with anger when they last met. Sauntering over to the little yellow love seat sideways to the fireplace he sat down and lit a cigarette.

If Libby wasn't with Hugo, where was she?

Miriam VanKreef came along the hall. She nodded to Hugo.

"Oh, Catherine, you're here."

Hugo was asked questions. The last time Miriam had seen Libby was around 7 o'clock the night before. "She came in to see whether I wanted anything. I had one of my attacks—my heart."

How she played that heart of hers!

King asked C. K. Cox, Quiz Farm Spokesman from Mitchell County, Ga., spokesman for the federation, if Cox wanted government buyers at all tomato auctions to push the government in the frozen food business and to give away surplus foods.

Cox replied that while he hadn't made any expert study of the program, he would rather give away the food than dump it. About 300 farmers, representatives from Alabama, Georgia, Florida and South Carolina cheered this report.

King, himself a large-scale vegetable producer, also objected when H. L. Wingate, president of the federation, said the government spent more on newsprint subsidies than on the farm subsidy program.

Raps Figures As False

King said Wingate's figures were inaccurate and that the farm subsidy program had cost $20,000,000, 000, not the $1,000,000,000 figure Wingate used. Wingate replied that his figure was right and King's wrong.

"Farmers were just late getting a little help and now you are trying to take it away from us," Wingate said.

Also discussed were cotton crops. King observed that there were already too many surplus stores held by the government. Wingate replied: "That's your life blood." He added that farm surplus should be carried in case of war.

"Are you suggesting we have another war?" King asked.

"No," Wingate answered, "I suggest we better have it there if war comes."

For the most part, the congressmen let the farmers do the talking. Saturday was the official end of the tour, but nine of the representatives will continue the investigations in Miami and parts of Southern Florida.

Civil Defense Benefits From School Program

HARRISBURG, Sept. 29.—(INS)—The long-range disaster survival program initiated by the State Defense Council in public schools was pictured today as making students more defense minded than many parents.

Deputy Director N. L. Wymard said indoctrination of students is the best way to get the information into homes as well as to assure an alert citizenry in the future.

He praised "nearly 100 per cent cooperation" by the schools.

Various Phases Taught

Wymard said various phases of civil defense are being taught in public schools, not only as civil defense itself but as part of other regular courses in the school curriculum.

Aided by Fire Drills

Other phases of the civil defense program are taught in such courses as health and civics, according to Wymard.

He said most schools have stepped up regular fire drills—which serve the same purpose as air raid drills—to the point that many buildings can be evacuated in less than two minutes.
